CLOUDSCALE 365

Do You Need to Engage with a Managed Service Provider?

01 Are you struggling with the management of your IT infrastructure or virtualization?

NO

According to recent research, the top challenges when internally managing IT infrastructure are the increasing complexity, demand for better security, increased availability, and lack of enough IT talent.

YES

02 Are you lacking enough skilful IT experts in-house or finding it hard to hire the right fit for your team?

NO

The salaries for infrastructure managers and cloud experts start from $154,728 per year in the USA, according to Indeed.com. These costs increase with all the additional spending on recruitment agencies and headhunters.

YES

03 Have you experienced downtime or reliability/availability issues during the past 12 months?

NO

According to Uptime's 2022 Data Center Resiliency Survey, 80% of data center managers and operators have experienced some type of outage in the past three years – a marginal increase over the norm, which has fluctuated between 70% and 80%.

YES

04 Do you have enough time for innovations or product development?

NO

Most of the enterprises spend significant time dealing with infrastructure problems, data availability and security issues. The situation became even more complex with a great part of the internal team working from home and companies struggling to ensure compliance.

YES

05 Are your customers satisfied with the services you provide and their reliability and availability?

NO

Application availability and customer satisfaction are top priorities for leading enterprises. No matter if you run your workloads in the cloud or apply a hybrid strategy, speed and reliability are must-haves.

YES

06 Are you trying to keep pace with all new technologies and innovations?

NO

To keep up with the latest cloud innovations is a must for those wishing to position themselves at the forefront of the market. Staying on top of the innovations, and understanding how they will affect your business and your productivity, is crucial in maintaining a competitive edge.

YES

It is the right time to discuss your IT needs and challenges with a managed service provider!
At CloudScale 365 we would be happy to provide you with a free initial consultancy with an IT expert! Get in touch with us!

You are doing a great job internally. Congratulations! Managing a growing infrastructure and IT processes with increasing complexity requires a lot of skills, so well done for your team!

CLOUDSCALE 365